Calkins, L. (2003). Units of Study for Primary Writing: A Year-long Curriculum. Heinemann.

Units of study are designed to help primary grade teachers implement a Writing Workshop without having to immerse themselves in all the learning before they ever begin. Calkins shows us how to teach writing through seven scripted units: Launching a Writing Workshop; Small Moments: Personal Narrative Writing; Writing for Readers: Teaching Skills and Strategies; The Craft of Revision; Authors as Mentors; Nonfiction Writing: Procedures and Reports; Poetry: Powerful Thoughts in Tiny Packages. The set also includes a conferring handbook and a CD-ROM of supporting print and video material.

Owocki, G. (1999). Literacy Through Play. Heinemann

Gretchen Owocki gives a convincing argument for using learning centers to teach reading and writing. She not only convinces us of how to use them but shows us how. This book honors developmentally appropriate literacy instruction that will have students reading and writing as they play.

Routman, R. (2000). Kids' Poems: Teaching Kindergarteners to Love Writing Poetry. Scholastic.

Regie Routman shows us, step-by-step, with actual examples from primary grade poets, how to help our primary students love writing poetry. I used these books (there is also one for 1st graders and one for 2nd graders) to teach a one week poetry unit in a multiage classroom of K-1 students. The ideas worked! They are simply awesome.

Wood-Ray, K. & Cleaveland, L. (2004). About the Authors. Heinemann.

This is the book that convinced me that children in K-2 really can be writers. I was so excited by this book that I even went and spent a day in Lisa's first grade classroom and I did see the children writing chapter books on nonfiction. This book shows how to launch a writing workshop by inviting children to do what they do naturally—make stuff. You'll love this book and the information about the little authors. There is also a DVD (2005) that shows these little authors at work.

Writing–Writing Workshop—3-8

ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY

Text Resources for Implementing the Writing Workshop Approach in Grades 3-8

Ratings on a 3-5 scale with 3 being useful and 5 being ones I consider to be the best.

Note: These are books that will show you how to implement Writing Workshop. Some are actual lessons that you can pick up and use immediately. Others will teach you how to implement Writing Workshop.

Allen, J. & Gonzalez, K. (1998). There's Room for Me Here: Literacy Workshop in the Middle School. Stenhouse Publishers. (Rating 3)

I appreciated the inclusive aspect of this book. It is written particularly for teachers who have middle school students who struggle with literacy. The authors provide strategies, content-area connections and management ideas. Janet Allen is one of my favorite authors for literacy. Kyle Gonzalez is a classroom teacher who shares what she does in her classroom.

Atwell, N. (1998). In the Middle: New Understandings About Writing, Reading, and Learning. Heinemann Press. (Rating 5)

This book launched my own journey into becoming passionate and knowledgeable about the workshop approach to teaching reading and writing. Atwell articulates the rationale for the workshop approach. She shares her own journey. She provides countless examples of how to implement the workshop approach. But the text is long and requires an ability to synthesize and apply. It is not a cookbook for teaching.

Atwell, N. (2002). Lessons That Change Writers. Heinemann. (Rating 5)

Teachers will find this a rich resource of mini-lessons with all support materials for an entire year. Atwell shares her actual scripts for teaching writing and provides all the materials, including student samples. This resource has been created for teachers who have identified what their students need to become better writers. The lessons should be chosen with care to be sure instruction matches student needs.

COMPREHENSIVE BALANCED LITERACY - WRITING

Calkins, L. (1994). The Art of Teaching Writing. Heinemann (Rating 5)

This is my all-time favorite book for teaching writing. Calkins writes with a passion and an artistry that convinces the reader that anything is possible. She shares many examples of Writing Workshop at work in New York City public schools. The book is long and requires an ability to synthesize and apply what Calkins is sharing with such passion. But this book will convince the reader that Writing Workshop stands at the pinnacle of literacy instruction. (Note: Another favorite book of mine is Calkins, The Art of Teaching Reading.)

Fletcher, R. (1993). What a Writer Needs. Heinemann. (Rating 5)

This is an incredible little book that teachers have used for reading aloud to their students. Fletcher gives ideas for crafting writing. Using a story format, he helps teachers know the importance of crafting tools, such as specificity, character creation, voice, leads, conclusions, tension. . . and the list goes on. This is one of my favorite books and graduate students have also rated this as a favorite. The copyright is dated, but the ideas are timeless.

Fletcher, R. (1996). Breathing In, Breathing Out: Keeping a Writer's Notebook. Heinemann. (Rating 5)

I believe that a writer's notebook is the key to helping our students live like writers. Fletcher uses this little book to demonstrate the power of collecting ideas and growing them into writing that matters.

Fletcher, R. & Portalupi, J. (1998). Craft Lessons: Teaching K-8. Stenhouse Publishers. (Rating 4 for me but 5 for teachers not familiar with mini-lessons)

This little book contains 78 mini-lessons for using literature to teach the craft of writing. Teachers just beginning to use mini-lessons for teaching will appreciate these scripted mini-lessons. It is also a valuable resource for knowing what children need to know to craft their writing. Mini-lessons are defined for K-2, 3-4, and 5-8.

Fletcher, R. & Portalupi, J. (2001). Writing Workshop: The Essential Guide. Heinemann. (Rating 3)

This little book provides simple frameworks for getting started with Writing Workshop. I find that the book is a bit simplistic but feel it does offer teachers a peek into beginning the Writing Workshop approach. You will just want to continue your own professional growth as you learn more about the workshop approach.

Harvey, S. (1998). Nonfiction Matters: Reading, Writing, and Research in Grades 3-8. Heinemann. (Rating 5)

Stephanie Harvey opens her mind and shows us how to use the workshop approach to really teach nonfiction. Every step you need to create an outstanding genre study for both reading and writing is in this book. A teacher could probably use this book to learn how to do writing workshop for any genre study. Students in Adventist schools especially need to know how to write nonfiction that really matters.

Heard, G. (2002). The Revision Toolbox: Teaching Techniques That Work. Heinemann Press. (Rating 5)

This is such an easy to use book for teaching students in grades 1-8 how to revise. There are ideas for revising words, structures and voice. Also included are ideas to help students do deep reading of their work. Finally, there are helpful ideas for conducting revision conferences and creating revision centers. I was able to read this book in less than two hours and all the ideas are so helpful.

Heffernan, L. (2004). Critical Literacy and Writer's Workshop: Bringing Purpose and Passion to Student Writing. International Reading Association. (Rating 4)

This is a marvelous book for the teacher who wants to help students grow beyond telling stories to writing with the intention of promoting social action. The author shares the framework for the way he teaches his 3rd graders to care deeply about their writing so they and others will live differently. I feel this book has incredible potential for helping Adventist educators teach students in grades 3-8 to write for purposes that will change the world, both spiritually and socially.

Portalupi, J. & Fletcher, R. (2001). Nonfiction Craft Lessons: Teaching Information Writing K-8. Stenhouse Publishers. (Rating 4 for me but 5 for teachers not familiar with mini-lessons)

This little book contains seventy-eight mini-lessons for using literature to teach the craft of nonfiction writing. Teachers just beginning to use mini-lessons for teaching will appreciate these scripted mini-lessons. It is also a valuable resource for knowing what children need to know to craft their nonfiction writing. Mini-lessons are defined for K-2, 3-4, and 5-8.

Portalupi, J. & Fletcher, R. (2005). Teaching the Qualities of Writing. Heinemann. (Rating 5)

This is a ready to use writing curriculum. Hands-on lessons, based on children's literature, explore the qualities of writing—ideas, design, language, conventions, voice. There is a resource guide, 112 lesson cards with scripted lessons for the teacher not yet comfortable with the mini-lesson approach and a CD-ROM that contains an analysis and discussion of 24 student writing samples. These two gifted teachers discuss what is good and what might need improvement in these samples. The cost is minimal for what you get.

Routman, R. (2005). Writing Essentials: Raising Expectations and Results While Simplifying Teaching. Heinemann. (Rating 4)

This is a wonderful resource for professional development, but is a little long. However, the DVD is an exceptional tool for seeing a Writing Workshop teacher in action. Routman also provides scripts of week-long writing units she has done with various elementary grades. I've read this one more than once. I read everything I can that Routman writes.

Schaefer, L. (2002). 10 Writing Lessons for the Overhead. Scholastic. (Rating 4)

Lola Schaefer, who writes children's books, shares mini-lessons that show models of strong writing. There are 20 transparencies for teaching voice, focus, leads, dialogue and more. These lessons are ready to use.

Wood-Ray, K. (2001). The Writing Workshop: Working Through the Hard Parts (And They're All Hard Parts). NCTE. (Rating 5 for me and for teachers somewhat familiar with Writing Workshop)

This book is one of my favorites because it pushed me to realize there is so much more to teaching Writing Workshop than what I had understood. Katie helps us to understand how rich the workshop environment should be and what happens when we raise our expectations. I've read this book twice in the past year.

Finally, I recommend with a rating of 5+ a set of four little books written by Ralph Fletcher. These books are written for students in grades 3-6. I would use them as shared reading for the reading part of my workshop and as resources for the writing part of workshop. In my opinion these are the best four books of this bibliography. Fletcher writes to kids as the outstanding writer that he is—and convinces them that they can write just as well as he does. The books are: Live Writing: Breathing Life Into Your Words (1999), A Writer's Notebook: Unlocking the Writer Within You (1996), Poetry Matters: Writing a Poem From the Inside Out (2002), and How Writers Work: Finding a Process That Works for You. The books are less than $10 each and can be used for both reading and writing. They are published by HarperTrophy.

Writing–Handwriting

OPTIONAL RESOURCES FOR HANDWRITING

Concerned Communications A Reason for Handwriting

A Reason for Handwriting is a scripture-based handwriting curriculum that helps to integrate faith and learning. It is developed to: 1) help children develop proper handwriting skills, 2) incorporate scripture verses designed to inspire young hearts and minds and 3) help children experience the fun and fulfillment of sharing God’s Word with others. To purchase materials, click here order.

The Handwriting Without Tears® is a curriculum that provides developmentally appropriate, multisensory tools and strategies for your classroom. The program follows research that demonstrates children learn more effectively by actively doing, with materials that address all styles of learning. It teaches effectively with joy. It provides easier, happier ways for children to master handwriting.

In the past, Handwriting Without Tears has been one cost for all schools in the Southern Union regardless of location. However, the new order forms are available according to your state. Below is the order form for the State of Georgia.

Teacher’s Guide to Teaching Handwriting

Schools may also elect to use Teacher’s Guide to Teaching Handwriting, an adaptation of the Georgia-Cumberland Conference Small Schools Curriculum Guide. To order, contact your local conference Office of Education.
